Manufacturing companies dealing with either a new device or an existing one in the R&D stage may face slow, buggy or difficult-to-test software. C++ helps to master resource restrictions and performance problems, especially in real-time systems.

WHICH CHALLENGES ARE YOU FACING NOW?

C++ is a reliable solution for companies that utilize hardware with limited resources (memory or computational) and face complex computation issues (AI at the edge, machine vision, emulators, physics, VR). It can provide effective solutions for needs related to porting a legacy application to a new hardware or software platform if software is difficult to test. It is supportive when there is a need for (hard) real-time software or to maintain work with libraries or tools that require C++.
